Solar car refused chance to shine on Parliament Hill

Marcelo da Luz pulled a solar car he helped build in 1999 from Toronto to Ottawa to raise awareness about Ontario's ban on solar vehicles and to challenge people to get into the habit of being eco-friendly. GRAHAM LANKTREE/METRO

Denied. Hill officials said refusal due to third-party publicity, solar-car owner says

GRAHAM LANKTREE

A man who pulled a solar car from Toronto to Ottawa all month long reached Parliament Hill to share the message behind his journey Monday, only to be denied access.

Marcelo da Luz pulled the solar car roughly 450 kilometres to highlight Ontario's solar-car ban and to challenge people to change one of their habits for 28 days and be more environmentally friendly.

"I'm not trying to tell people what to do," said da Luz. "I'm just asking them to think about their habits and how they affect the environment. Pick one and try to make a change."

Turning off lights and tap water when they're not being used is an easy change for people to begin thinking about, he said. Not using throwaway coffee cups is another, he said.

Despite putting in a request for a permit to enter Parliament Hill with the car weeks ago, da Luz's media team said they were told he was denied access because the event was announced through third-party media beforehand.

But that didn't stop him from setting up his solar car on Wellington Street to talk to passers by about his journey. Among the onlookers was Green party Leader Elizabeth May.

"Prime Minister Harper keeps hauling tanks to the front door to fire 21-gun salutes for visiting dignitaries," she said. "It would have been great to increase awareness of the technological breakthrough of having an electric car run on its own solar panels at the front doors of Centre Block. Instead, we had to crowd the sidewalk."

A disappointed but unfazed de Luz said, "I set out with the goal of doing 28 presentations during this journey, but I've done more than 40 and spoken to thousands of school children about how they can help change the environment. So I'm happy."

Hill officials were contacted, but didn't provide comment by publication time.

Accused man shot baby in hospital massacre: Crown

Trial begins. Opening statement alleges that defendant participated in 1994 genocide

jessica.smith@metronews.ca

Jacques Mungwarere is accused of participating in a hospital massacre and shooting a baby dead during the Rwandan genocide.

Mungwarere's genocide trial began in Ottawa before Justice Michel Charbonneau Monday, and is expected to last five to six months.

Crown lawyer Luc Boucher said, in an opening statement in French, that the 1994 Rwandan genocide consisted of "massacre after massacre" of Tutsis.

Mungwarere is accused of participating in a premeditated mass killing at a hospital in the Kibuye region, where Tutsis were taking refuge on April 16, 1994.

Boucher said Mungwarere was among a group of armed Hutu militants who surrounded the hospital and killed most of those inside. Mungwarere chased those who fled through the hills, he said.

One witness will testify that Mungwarere shot a baby, left behind by a Tutsi who was fleeing.

Tutsi and Hutu witnesses will testify, including some people who survived the hospital massacre.

The first witness, an expert in Rwandan political history, Timothy Longman, testified about Rwanda's colonial history, the political structures at the time of the genocide and the current political and judicial systems.

Defence lawyer Marc Nerenberg cross-examined Longman primarily about Rwandan justice and the community-based "Gacaca courts." Longman said the courts have seen 900,000 to one million people — including a majority of Hutu men who were adults in 1994 — tried for genocide-related crimes. Longman testified that about 90 per cent of the cases led to conviction and the judges, who have almost no formal training, have felt pressured to convict.

Under questioning from Nerenberg, Longman said some of the witnesses have tried to use the community courts for their own personal ends.

Christian Deslauriers, another defence lawyer, said some of the witnesses have testified in previous genocide trials, including at "Gacaca courts," and the defence will highlight discrepancies in their testimonies.

- In the 100 days after Rwandan president Juvénal Habyarimana was killed in a plane crash on April 6 1994, 80 per cent of the Tutsi population — 700,000 people total — were killed.
- Shortly after the genocide, about 130,000 people were incarcerated in overcrowded prisons.
- In 2005, about 250,000 Rwandan laypersons began to serve as judges in Rwandan community courts.

Annual report

Crime down, cop payroll up in 2011

The level of reported crime in Ottawa fell 2.3 per cent from 2010 to 36,622 offences, Ottawa police said in their annual report for 2011.

Preliminary statistics show a decrease in violent crime (down five per cent), property-related offences (down one per cent), and administration-of-justice offences (down eight per cent), the report said.

The force's "solvency" rate for the 939,598 calls for service it received sat at 38.9 per cent. Salaries grew six per cent over last year to more than $205.1 million. METRO

No more Sunday Citizen

Layoffs at Postmedia

The Ottawa Citizen is cutting 20 newsroom positions and stopping its Sunday edition as part of a series of cost-cutting measures announced by its parent firm Postmedia.

The last Sunday Citizen will be July 15. Layoffs were also announced at the Montreal Gazette, Calgary Herald and Edmonton Journal. The changes come as Postmedia tries to cut print-related production costs. Earlier this month, the publisher also decided to cancel an in-house wire service, Postmedia News, resulting in the loss of some two dozen jobs.

The Toronto-based company, formerly part of the Canwest media empire broken up in 2010, said its net loss was $11.1 million in the three months ended Feb. 29. That compared with a loss of $12.5 million a year earlier when it booked a $1.8-million loss from discontinued operations sold to Glacier Media.

Winnipeg mother reunited with her missing children

Alleged abduction.

Four years after they were taken by their father, kids found in Guadalajara, Mexico

Emily Cablek has been reunited with her two children almost four years after they were taken from her, moved around Mexico and kept hidden from public view, authorities said Monday.

Cablek saw her children Dominic and Abby Maryk, now eleven and nine years old respectively, on the weekend after they were found in a home in Guadalajara on Friday. Their father, Kevin Maryk, was arrested on a charge of child abduction and is in custody in Mexico.

"They absolutely, 100 per cent recognized their mother. (They) have many memories, Dominic is looking forward to a Slurpee," Christy Dzikowicz, with the Canadian Centre for Child Protection, said Monday. The centre is a non-profit agency that works with governments and law enforcement to help protect children from abduction, exploitation and abuse.

"But much has been stolen from them. No school to learn. No doctors to take care. No friends to play with. No mother to love, nurture and protect them."

Cablek said in a statement that she is the "happiest mommy" in the world right now and would like to have uninterrupted time with her children.

"I'm asking please give my family some privacy so that we can begin to heal," she said. "We have a long road ahead and I want my children to feel completely safe through all of it. They deserve nothing less."

Police allege Maryk abducted his children during a court-ordered visit on Aug. 16, 2008, and moved around frequently to avoid detection. He lived for a while in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, before moving to Guadalajara. Police allege he kept the kids inside the home during the day — forbidding them from going to school, playing with other kids or seeing a physician.

"This is an evil individual who did not want to be found and did take steps to try and ensure that these kids were never located," Det. Sgt. Shauna Neufeld of the Winnipeg Police Service's missing persons unit told a news conference.

Authorities are now trying to extradite Maryk, 40, and Robert Neil Groen, 41, from Mexico on child-abduction charges. Police have also issued a Canada-wide warrant for Cody John McKay, 23, who is alleged to have helped in the abduction.

Quebec resumes talks with student groups

A two-week period marked by burgeoning protest and bitter recrimination has now entered a new phase, with Quebec student leaders back at the negotiating table with the provincial government Monday.

Student representatives arrived in Quebec City for their first face-to-face meeting with government officials since mid-May.

Talks had broken off when the government tabled emergency legislation aimed at controlling the protests. The move appears to have backfired, however. Festive and largely peaceful demonstrations have spread to other cities — in some cases even outside Quebec and Canada.

As they entered the meeting, students said they expected the government to compromise on the key issue of tuition increases that sparked their movement in the first place. They said any solution would include two elements: a retreat on tuition fees and on the emergency law, Bill 78.

The student leaders also warned that they won't be pressured into hastily accepting a deal this time. A few weeks ago, the sides emerged from an all-night negotiating session with an agreement that was ultimately rejected by voters at student assemblies.

The students are now saying they have more leverage, and less pressure, than they did the last time. At the time, school semesters had been at risk of being cancelled but they have since been paused and will resume in mid-August.

The government, on the other hand, has a more immediate worry: that a prolonged dispute will cause chaos for tourists heading to take in Montreal's big summer festivals.

Russia losing patience with Assad regime

Turning point. Foreign minister's comments in wake of slaughter unusually critical

A weekend massacre of more than 100 people emerged as a potential turning point in the Syrian crisis Monday, galvanizing even staunch ally Russia to take an unusually hard line against President Bashar Assad's government.

Analysts said Russia may be warning Assad that he needs to change course or lose Moscow's support, which has been a key layer of protection for the Syrian government during the uprising that began in March 2011. Russia has grown increasingly critical of Damascus in recent months, but Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov's latest comments were unusually strong. Although he said opposition forces have terrorists among them, he put the blame for 15 months of carnage primarily on Assad's government. "The government bears the main responsibility for what is going on," Lavrov said in Moscow following a meeting with British Foreign Secretary William Hague. "Any government in any country bears responsibility for the security of its citizens."

Alexei Malashenko, a Middle East expert with the Carnegie Moscow Center, said Lavrov's comments suggest Russia may be backing away from its long-standing support for Damascus. "Bashar has definitely gotten the sense that he may lose Russia's sympathy, and he may step back a bit," Malashenko said.

Tories table bill to end CP strike

Labour dispute.

'The work stoppage is preventing our ability to keep products moving in and out of Canada':
Labour minister

Labour Minister Lisa Raitt says the government must act now to end a strike by 4,800 Canadian Pacific Railway workers in order to preserve the country's international reputation.

The Harper government has tabled back-to-work legislation, the third time it has intervened in a labour dispute in similar fashion in the last year.

With legislation introduced after question period on Monday, Raitt said she expects the railroad to be back in business by Thursday. Mediated contract talks between the railway and the Teamsters union representing locomotive engineers and conductors collapsed Sunday.

The union says the company is demanding up to a 40 per cent cut in the earned pensions of employees, after making a $570-million profit last year.

"We've spent out entire careers paying for this, contributing to this and relying on this," said Doug Finnsen, union vice-president and chief negotiator. "And because the shareholders want increased value, they want to squeeze it out of our pension plan and then put it over to the shareholders."

Gold and Silver Coins Selling for Highest Prices in Over 30 Years Due to Weak Economy and It's Happening Right Here in Nepean/Ottawa West!

By DAVID MORGAN
STAFF WRITER

ICC will be placing ads in newspapers, radio and running television spots this week asking people to bring in any old silver and gold coins made before 1968 and U.S. coins made before 1970. Those that bring in their coins will be able to speak with collectors one on one and have their coins looked at by a specialist. With the help of these ICC members, offers will be made to those that have coins made before 1968. Offers will be made based on silver or gold content and the rarity of the coins. All coins made before 1968 will be examined and purchased including gold coins, silver coins, silver dollars, all types of nickels and pennies. Those that decide to sell their coins will be paid on the spot.

If you are like a lot of people you might have a few old coins or even a coffee can full lying around. If you have ever wondered what they are worth now might be your chance to find out and even sell them if you choose. They could be worth a lot according to the International Coin Collectors also known as ICC. Collectors will pay a fortune for some coins and currency for their collections. If it is rare enough, one coin could be worth over $100,000 according to Eric Helms, coin collector and ICC member. One ultra rare dime, an 1894S Barber, sold for a record $1.9 million to a collector in July of 2007. While that is an extreme example, many rare and valuable coins are stashed away in dresser drawers or lock boxes around the country. The ICC and its collector members have organized a traveling event in search of all types of coins and currency. Even common coins can be worth a significant amount due to the high price of silver and gold, says Helms. Washington quarters and Roosevelt dimes can be worth many times their face value. Recent silver markets have driven the price up on common coins made of silver. Helms explains that all U.S. half dollars, quarters and dimes made before 1970 contain 90% silver and are sought after any time silver prices rise. Right now it's a sellers market he said.

The rarest coins these collectors are looking for include $20, $10, $5 and $2 1/2 gold coins and any coin made before 1850. These coins always bring big premiums according to the ICC. Silver dollars are also very sought after nowadays.

Other types of items the ICC will be purchasing during this event include U.S. currency, gold bullion, investment gold, silver bars, silver rounds, proof sets, etc. Even foreign coins are sought after and will be purchased.

Also at this event anyone can sell their gold jewellery, dental gold or anything made of gold on the spot. Gold is currently trading at record high prices. Bring anything you think might be gold and the collectors will examine, test and price it for free. If you decide to sell, you will be paid on the spot - it has been an unknown fact that coin dealers have always paid more for jewellery and scrap gold than other jewelers and pawn brokers.

So whether you have one coin you think might be valuable or a large collection you recently inherited, you can talk to these collectors for free. If you're lucky you may have a rarity worth thousands. Either way there is nothing to lose and it sounds like fun!

Press barons bullied U.K. PM: Testimony

Scandal. 'I took a strategic decision to manage these people, not confront them': Tony Blair

Former Prime Minister Tony Blair said Monday that he couldn't stand up to the Britain's media tycoons while in power, telling an official media-ethics inquiry that doing so could have dragged his administration into a political quagmire.

Blair's testimony, briefly interrupted by a heckler who burst into the courtroom to call him a war criminal, included his longtime concerns about what he once described as the "feral beasts" of the media but had to tread carefully where press barons were concerned.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Background

Justice Brian Leveson's inquiry was set up following revelations of phone hacking at Rupert Murdoch's News of the World tabloid, a scandal that has rocked the British establishment and raised questions about whether top politicians helped shield Murdoch from official scrutiny.

BMO survey. Fewer home renovations planned

Fewer Canadian homeowners are planning renovations this year, possibly reflecting increased concern over household debt, according to the Bank of Montreal's annual home renovation report.

The online survey conducted for BMO by Leger Marketing and released Monday found that 51 per cent of homeowners plan a renovation project this year, down from 62 per cent in 2011.

Among other things, the survey indicated that single-family homeowners far outpaced their condo-dwelling counterparts — 62 per cent versus 41 per cent respectively — when it came to renovation plans.

By region, 50 per cent of respondents in British Columbia were planning a renovation project, 52 per cent in Alberta, 67 per cent in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, 55 per cent in Ontario, 37 per cent in Quebec and 59 per cent in the Atlantic provinces.

A PUFF TO EASE THE PAIN

SHE SAYS...
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca/shesays

A few years ago, my father was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis. I can't really pinpoint the exact date, because it took a good two years for my mother to stop referring to his illness as

"MS-like symptoms" and actually start saying "MS."

Over time I've watched his ability to walk deteriorate. In 2010 we took a family trip to Cambodia and I saw him scale the temple walls at Angkor Wat from sunrise to sunset. Last weekend I helped him as he struggled to lift himself out of a Muskoka chair.

Sometimes I think about whether my father will be able to walk me down the aisle at my wedding, or whether he'll even be alive to witness it. Then, of course, I immediately stop thinking about those things, as they lead to crying fits in public places.

The more I'm confronted with the realities of this all-too-common autoimmune disease, the more desperate I'm becoming in my devouring of information about anything that might help.

High Times

"While other parents read DARE pamphlets about the perils of drug abuse to their children, my father enjoyed a monthly subscription to High Times magazine."

Last week, the University of California released a study demonstrating the benefits of marijuana for individuals suffering from MS. The study found that patients who smoked cannabis once a day experienced a significant reduction in muscle tightness and other painful symptoms associated with MS.

As a hippie, my father was practising this form of self-medication a good 40-something years before he was ever diagnosed. The only real difference is now he has a medical-marijuana licence and a copy of the Canadian Medical Association Journal to back him up.

While other parents read DARE pamphlets about the perils of drug abuse to their children, my father enjoyed a monthly subscription to High Times magazine. Marijuana was never an after-school-special kind of conversation topic in my house — it wasn't cool or dangerous, it was just simply there. Consequently, I had no interest in it. After all, what's the point of teenage rebellion if the person you're trying to revolt against is munching on "special" cookies in your living room?

I've never judged him for smoking it and I certainly don't now. Watching him self-medicate his way through this disease has changed the way I think about drugs and pain. In fact, it's changed my outlook on a lot of things in my life.

It makes me want to take the stairs every day, knowing that perhaps one day I won't be able to. It inspires me to run outside even when I'm feeling lazy — not because I should, but because I can.

Rest in Presley peace

For the right price, you or a loved one can rest in peace in the tomb of the King.

Celebrity auctioneer Darren Julien is selling Elvis Presley's original crypt to the highest bidder as part of his Music Icons auction later this month.

The tomb is located inside the granite and marble mausoleum at the Forest Hill Cemetery in Memphis, Tenn.

Presley was interred there alongside his mother, Gladys, after he died Aug. 16, 1977. Two months later, Julien says the winning bid from the auction beginning June 23 will receive the crypt, the opening and closing of the vault for burial, a memorialization inscription, and use of a chapel for a committal service. Transportation and funeral-home charges are not included.

Homecoming buzz

The bees are back in Britain

They've been away, but now they are — hopefully — buzzing back to their rightful place in the bucolic British countryside.

Around 50 short-haired bees were released into an English nature reserve Monday, some two decades after they were wiped out from most of rural Britain.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wild-flower welcome

"Our farmland always used to have wild-flower borders. We are just asking farmers to go back to the way things were, and the response has been overwhelmingly positive."

Nikki Gammans, ecologist and project leader

Betting the farm

- Ecologists hope that with the support of farmers who have agreed to grow flowers and plants that help bees flourish, the bugs will zip across the country again.

- The population of short-haired bees — scientific name Bombus subterraneus — has declined dramatically across most of Europe the last two decades as their habitat was destroyed.

Born to be the Bombus

Bombus subterraneus were declared extinct in Britain 12 years ago. But the short-haired bees survived in Skane, Sweden, and three years ago, Natural England, a U.K. government-backed conservation project, launched a program to bring them back into the wild. The bees that made it through the screening process were released into the wild Monday in a nature reserve in Dungeness, Kent, in southeast England, filled with wild flowers like red clover, white dead nettle, yellow flag and tufted vetches.

De Niro given honorary degree

As he received an honorary doctorate Sunday, Oscar-winning actor Robert De Niro told Bates College graduates that despite his own lack of formal education, he made out OK. During a 15-minute address that was by turns sincere and irreverent, De Niro drew a steady stream of laughter from the 463 graduating seniors and more than 5,000 onlookers at the private, liberal arts college's campus. De Niro, who quit high school to pursue an acting career, was one of three high-profile guests who received honorary degrees at the Bates commencement. PBS Newshour senior correspondent Gwen Ifill and Princeton University molecular biologist Bonnie Bassler also were honoured. But it was De Niro who stole the show as he received an honorary doctorate of fine arts degree. "In many ways, leaving school when I did it was an advantage. I saved nearly $6,000 by not having to pay tuition and expenses for four years of education," he said. "I feel a little foolish, because if I had waited until now not to go to college, I could have saved around a quarter of a million," he said.

Rookie director steps into fairy tale land

Snow White. First-time director Rupert Sanders talks about being handed the keys to Universal's $175 million project

Metro World News in Hollywood

In researching his visually distinctive debut film, Snow White and the Huntsman, British director Rupert Sanders avoided one animated classic in particular.

"I actually haven't seen the Walt Disney (Snow White) for ages because I didn't want to be tarnished by it," he says.

"I looked at other filmmakers, like Roman Polanski's Macbeth. I watched Kingdom of Heaven. I think I set out trying not to make a big commercial fairy tale movie, but I wanted to make a big, Lawrence of Arabia kind of medieval tale, and that's really what I think the film is."

But certainly Universal Pictures — which is betting a lot giving a first-time director the keys to a $175 million fantasy film — is hoping for at least in part a big commercial fairy-tale movie.

"Universal have been an incredible partner to work with," Sanders insists.

"First of all, they wrote a massive cheque for a novice to take a lot of their money and go over to Europe untouched and make a film. They've been very trusting."

Of course, part of that trust can be attributed to the Snow White in the title, since the source material continues to be hugely popular.

So what is it about that fairy tale that keeps drawing audiences — and studio executives — back?

"It's the best fairy tale, really. I don't really like them when they get too princess-y. I don't love balls and sleeping beauties and things like that," Sanders says.

"It's one of those stories that is about the human condition. It's about so many of those emotions that we go through — jealousy, the way we look," Sanders says.

"I think in a way it's more relevant today than it was. Everything is so image-obsessed... I hope it has the same lesson in life to our young people. It teaches you a lot about how to cope with the human condition, how

Updating the story

There's no damsel in distress here

The days of the damsel in distress are clearly over. Audiences have already seen a Snow White take up arms, with Lily Collins dueling with — and besting — her Prince Charming in Mirror, Mirror in March. But in Snow White and the Huntsman, the fairy tale princess (played by Twilight star Kristen Stewart) goes to war.

What really sets Rupert Sanders' film apart — aside from the stark visuals and brutal violence — is its take on the core theme of beauty and a woman's obsession with it. Even in the Brothers Grimm version, the Queen is threatened by Snow White's natural allure, but Sanders takes it even further. Charlize Theron's evil Queen Ravenna stays young and beautiful by sucking the life out of younger women, and she's hoping to cure her aging problem for good by consuming the heart of her stepdaughter.

Full of imaginative and nightmarish visual effects, massive battles and epic landscapes, Snow White and the Huntsman is by far the more ambitious of the two Snow White films — which is surprising, given that the lackluster Mirror, Mirror was helmed by the usually distinctive and daring Tarsem Singh.

to cope with death, basically."

So what's next for Sanders? "I am done with fairy tales," Sanders says with a weary laugh.

So what will he do for a second feature film? "I'd love to make something contemporary or sci-fi, which is my favourite genre. You can make a film that's sociopolitical without it being a rant. You can put a bigger magnifying glass on our world now if you put the story 100 years in the future."

Of course, if Snow White and the Huntsman is a hit, he might not be as done with fairy tales as he suggests. "Who knows. I think it will be hard for me not to go back into the Snow White world if that world appeared again," Sanders admits.

"It's its own story. If there's a desire for people to want to continue with those characters — I think there will be, they're such great characters, they're well-played."

Of course, there's at least one obstacle to a possible sequel to the fairy tale film: "A couple of people end up dead, so I'd have to fill those shoes," he says.

• • • • •

In the very violent, very funny and exceedingly profane Goon, Canadian-born director Michael Dowse (the man behind the Fubar films) tells the story of a genial knucklehead named Doug Glatt who's a bar bouncer in a small Massachusetts town. When Doug unleashes the fury of his fists in aid of his mouthy best friend (Jay Baruchel, who also shares co-writing credits with Evan Goldberg), he's spotted by the coach of the very minor-league local team (Nicholas Campbell). The wily coach coaxes Doug to play for his brother's hockey team, the Halifax Highlanders, who are sorely in need of a miracle. Doug's only task is to beat up anyone who stands in the way of the Highlanders' top scorer, who has recently lost his mojo. Sweet-hearted Doug, well played by Scott, is proud to both draw and spill red on behalf of his team. Goon looks set to skate alongside Slap Shot as another movie that really gets the spirit of hockey's animal attraction.

Adapting Lionel Shriver's bestselling 2003 novel, director Lynne Ramsay examines the school shootings phenomenon from the point of view of parents left emotionally and physically brutalized by the aftermath. Travel writer Eva Khatchadourian (Tilda Swinton, spectacular) and her photographer husband Franklin (John C. Reilly, skating) thought they'd left all their cares behind when they moved from New York City to a big house in the suburbs. They wanted a place to raise their son, Kevin. Kevin, though fine with his father, has a toxic relationship with his mother. We Need to Talk About Kevin offers few deep insights into a violent phenomenon for which, in truth, there may be no satisfactory answers.

Beyoncé is human? Hard to believe

scene@metronews.ca

Radiant new mama Beyoncé was back on the stage for a four-night engagement at Atlantic City's Revel casino over the holiday weekend, and she didn't forget to pack her signature assortment of sparkly two-piece bodysuits and sky-high heels.

But the singer admits it wasn't easy to get in beach shape by Memorial Day weekend.

"Y'all have no idea how hard I worked," she told her audience — which included Michelle, Sasha and Malia Obama — during her Saturday evening performance.

"I had to lose 60 pounds.

They had me on that treadmill. I ate lettuce! Now tonight I'm going to get chocolate wasted."

Now, we always thought the rumours that Beyoncé hired a surrogate and faked her pregnancy were crazy (unless it was a particularly slow gossip day). But can you imagine this lady at a gym or eating anything as lowly as lettuce? If she is, in fact, human, we're having a hard time believing Beyoncé had a baby in January.

Justin Bieber MATT SAYLES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bad Bieber: Did the star lay a smackdown?

Justin Bieber may have finally had enough of photographers.

The singer is a suspect in a criminal battery case after getting into a "physical altercation" with a paparazzo in Los Angeles on Sunday afternoon, according to the police report.

The "victim complained of pain and requested medical attention" and was released shortly after being taken to the hospital.

We're curious: Is there enough money in Bieber's bank account for you to admit that his baby-soft hands were capable of inflicting pain?

Queen of the unexplained exit?

Britney Spears' X Factor tenure is off to a rough start. After allegedly storming off the set after a contestant's rendition of one of her hits the first day of filming — a claim she denied on Twitter — Spears reportedly made another sudden exit on her second day, according to Us Weekly. "After a very popular contestant finished, Brit stood up and immediately walked towards the tunnel where judges enter," a source says.

"Her bodyguards (and entourage) jumped up and ran after her. She was moving fast. It was odd." While the reason for her departure was unclear, the source says Spears returned after a short while and resumed her work as though nothing had happened.

1 What's up Doc?

A staggering third of Americans skip their yearly health check-up. But thinking ignorance is bliss could really mess you up.

Being "too busy" is the most common excuse for failing to go to the doctors says Dr. Oz, but the truth is people don't want to be inconvenienced with bad news.

"Who wants to hear they have cancer? What people don't get is that a doctor is there to guide you to better health, not make you feel bad or embarrassed. They help you understand your health so you can prevent problems in the future."

2 Watch your waist

Everyone should know their weight and BMI (Body Mass Index). Although weight can vary, BMI should always be below 25. Anything above 30 or below 18.5 means you risk developing type 2 diabetes or heart disease.

According to Dr. Oz the most important thing to monitor is waist size: "Waist size predicts the amount of fat inside the intestines: it should be no more than half your height. It's the most dangerous type of fat for your body. Stored in excess, it can put pressure on the kidneys, which can then raise your blood pressure and can also poison the liver, leading to higher cholesterol levels and diabetes."

3 Peer pressure

Studies have shown that people who lost weight by engaging in group activities were more successful at keeping it off in the long term.

"The moment you go public about your proclamation of health, you're holding yourself accountable," explains Dr. Oz. "Friends won't sabotage your efforts, but on the contrary be inspired by your achievements."

Another thing to watch out for is habits.

"Habits are the 'norm' but whether they're good or bad it is down to you.

Imagine a world where you ate right, exercised and had great sex. Unfortunately, the smug and happy are in the minority. Most of us are stressed out, sexually frustrated and regulars at KFC. According to Dr. Oz, getting healthy isn't about living longer, it's about living and looking better today.

DR. OZ'S SIX DAYS, SIX WAYS TO A BRIGHTER YOU

When was the last time you went for a health checkup? A month? A year? America's top doctor Dr. Oz, talks to Metro about the basic steps to feeling and looking great.

ROMINA MCGUINNESS
romina.mcguinness@metro.lu

Exercise: all it takes is 7 easy minutes

Emotionally satisfied people have one thing in common: they all set aside a few minutes a day of "me time," mostly in the morning.

Dr. Oz advises you to spend seven minutes every morning doing a combination of yoga, push ups and sit ups.

"Morning is the one time of day when you are still in control of your destiny. Seven minutes of light exercise is enough to reduce stress levels and make you feel as if you are in control of your life."

Why seven minutes? Don't we have to sweat it out for at least 20?

"We all have seven minutes to spare in the morning. It's also enough time to increase heart rate. If you want to exercise more, you don't have to run a marathon but something as simple as a brisk walk for 30-60 minutes, five times a week can lower your risk of heart disease by about 40 per cent."

Assess your stress

Get more zzz ...

Sleep is the most important thing we need and the single thing we lack the most: "Seven and a half hours a night is an ideal amount. If you've trouble sleeping it could be a sign something is holding you back either physically or psychologically," says Dr. Oz. "If all else fails, try and ease your body into rest. Fifty per cent of people sleep better in colder temperatures, wearing loose clothes or no clothes and having dimmed the lights 30 minutes before going to bed.

Stress alone could be the reason why you can't lose weight. It affects the neuroendocrine system that increases the amount of fat stored around the abdomen. It's also indirectly linked to the consumption of too many fatty or sugary foods, as well as inactivity.

"Some of us are comfortable being uncomfortable. Instead of running away from stress we need to embrace the discomfort. The only solution to getting over it is to come up with better coping strategies that force you to manage your stress such as assertiveness training, or even better — exercise."

Go nuts

A no-nut peanut butter?

BEST HEALTH

Best Health Magazine

A No-Nut "Peanut Butter"?

Yes, you read that right. In each issue of Best Health magazine, we show you interesting products you might not have seen, and this month we found something on grocery store shelves that's great news for anyone with a peanut allergy: No Nuts Golden Peabutter. It's a spread made of brown peas, and before you think that it sounds gross, I can say that it's actually good, and similar in taste and texture to real peanut butter. (Of course, some people with peanut allergies would be turned off by something that resembles peanut butter). Besides peas, the ingredients include canola oil, sugar and palm oil. One tablespoon is equal in protein, fat and calories to peanut butter.

What also makes this product great is that it's Canadian. Pea farmer Joe St. Denis of Legal, Alta, was travelling in Egypt when he discovered a love for hummus. Back home, he experimented, making it with different varieties of peas. But he found it tasted more like peanut butter than it did hummus. An owner of Mountain Meadows Food Processing, which sells No Nuts across Canada at grocery chains such as Sobeys and Metro, says "Brown peas taste mild, unlike green or yellow peas. And we don't add flavouring." For more interesting new products and information on healthy living, check out Best Health, on newsstands now.

life@metronews.ca

It's the details at Odile that get noticed: the old-fashioned blue jug on the counter, the cubes of wood at the base of the pillar, the white smooth stone on the tray with the bill. And the attention to detail is not just in the cosy surroundings but in the food as well.

The drink choices were difficult: grapefruit and ginger or sparkling lemon with sour cherry reduction. I chose lemon and cherry and was happy.

The lunch choices were difficult, too. I chose the Croque Odile simply for the name (I'm sometimes fickle) and was delighted with the result. Smoked artisanal ham, creamy béchamel, melted gouda, arugula, thinly sliced apples and toasted walnuts on crusty bread. Every bite was a contrast in textures and flavours.

The dessert: pear tatin. The slices of pear were caramelized but not too sweet and served with a rich caramel sauce and freshly whipped (with a whisk) cream topped with finely chopped pistachios and praline.

I would eat lunch at Odile every day. It was perfect.

Champagne etiquette

Hello Mr. Butler, I am going to be hosting an event for my parents' 50th wedding anniversary at my home and I'm in need of some champagne etiquette. What's the right temperature, what kind of glasses should I get, how much do I fill a glass and how do I make a toast? Thanks! Nervous Daughter

Dear Nervous Daughter,
What an exciting event! Good champagne should be served cold, so keeping it in the fridge for a few days then on ice at the bar when it is being served is important.

When opening the champagne never point it at anyone and hold the "cage" and the cork tight with a napkin while slowly turning the bottle. You will feel the pressure build up and the cork will pop out easily.

When serving, you can use either a champagne flute or saucer, though the "fashion" of today is flutes.

When you pour champagne, it foams up (just like soda pop) so pour slowly and just a small amount in every glass — this is called "priming" the glass. Then return and fill the flute with additional champagne. Don't fill the glass more than three-quarters full.

When you toast your parents, you technically don't let the glasses touch each other, however many people unfortunately do "clink" glasses.

Keep your speech short, to the point and announce clearly, ask everyone to raise their glass and say something like "to our parents" and then have a sip and voila — your toast is done!

Let us know how it goes. If you write to me I will do my best to guide you and your group through the process!

Champagne should always be served cold. ISTOCK our ex-boyfriends what they liked to do because it was probably what our current boyfriends would want to do as well.

Why create new, romantic memories, when you could relive old ones in a friendly game of "deal with my baggage?"

OK, I'll stop being mean here, but asking your ex for advice was a little insensitive. He doesn't own the city, but it doesn't mean you have to rub it in his face that you're a globe-trotting hottie with a new love in tow. Happy travels!

Claire: Dear Hmmph I'm not sure whether you should be astounded that he actually cares enough to be offended so many years later, or annoyed that he should make this about him (which might just be categorized under "twit-like"). I'm surprised he has a problem with a little friendly tour-guiding — especially if you've stayed in touch regularly enough to know that he's in a new and happy relationship, but since he does, tease him about it to keep things light, and move on. And take it as a compliment to your enduring awesomeness.

Last week I offered my two cents worth of advice to a woman wondering what to do with a divorce settlement of $20,000. I encouraged her to take time deciding whether to pay down debt, save, spend or invest.

Now I have some suggestions about the latter. Investing a lump sum can be tricky. For instance, an investment made in September 2007 on the eve of the financial crash may still be in the negative.

Divide any windfall into pieces and invest gradually to spread your risk over time. It's far better to miss out on some gains than fall into an abyss.

My choice for most investors is Exchanged Traded Funds or ETFs with very low fees. Most are lower than .50 annually compared to the average

If, for example, you wanted one-third of the $20,000 in bonds, make that entire investment now as the short term bonds will roll over automatically and take advantage of higher rates in the future.

Divide the remaining $13,000 plus into four to six pieces and invest gradually in the chosen Canadian and US ETFs over the next six months to a year.

There will be a trading fee for each transaction but you only pay it once until you sell, and the additional cost balances the risk.

Millennials — game your way to financial literacy

FUN AND FRUGAL
Leslie Scorgie
money@metronews.ca
Twitter: @Lesleyscorgie

I read an interesting article over tea last week in TheWeek.com that described characteristics of the millennial generation; those born in the 1980s and 1990s (of which I am one). Besides claiming that our generation is narcissistic, the piece outlines the fact that most are broke, indebted and stressed-out spendthrifts.

But, working in our favour is the fact that millennials are technologically savvy and want to engage in entrepreneurial and other money-making ideas.

So, here's my big idea for the millennials — game your way to financial literacy. Not only will you sharpen your money IQ, but you'll learn how to connect your big ideas with building your net worth. That in turn will reduce stress.

I've been very impressed with a new financial literacy gaming app called the Cranial Cash Clash which was created through the Investor Education Fund.

The Cranial Cash Clash is a free innovative online and mobile game that is available through Apple, Android or online at GetSmarterAboutMoney.ca. The purpose of the game is to help Canadians assess how much they really need to learn about money and which aspects of money management they should focus on improving.

The game leads you through fun and educational thought-provoking multiple choice questions that test your knowledge on a wide range of financial topics like spending, saving, investing, debt, financial fraud, financial planning, RRSPs and retirement planning.

The subjects are categorized as Debt Drama, Quest to Invest, Scam Exam, Saving for School, Investment Shopping, Concise Advice, Unsure? Insure! and Ready, Set, Retire. Once you're through the questions, there are resources you can browse through to enhance your learning.

Players compete to score cranial points; ideally motivating Canadians to raise their scores and their understanding of financial literacy. For the socially networked millennials, you can post your results on Facebook, Twitter or email them to friends. For parents and teachers, this is a great way to engage in 'money 101' conversations with your children.

No matter your age or financial acumen, you'll learn a lot through the Cranial Cash Clash and it's loads of fun. Gaming your way to financial literacy can actually pay off!

Bosh’s return still up in air

Chris Bosh is taking steps toward returning to the Miami lineup, though it remains unclear when the Heat will actually see their star forward in uniform again. Bosh, who has been sidelined since straining an abdominal muscle in Game 1 of Miami’s second-round series against Indiana, did what the Heat called a “very light” on-court workout Sunday. Coach Erik Spoelstra said there’s no target date for his return. The Heat took on the Boston Celtics in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference final on Monday night. Brown leads way on Kings’ journey to promised land

NHL. Regular-season trade rumours propelled L.A. captain to take his game to another level

If Dustin Brown stands up in the Los Angeles locker-room before the Stanley Cup final opener Wednesday night and delivers a stirring, emotional speech, his teammates won’t know how to react.

“Well, he’s not a rah-rah guy,” veteran Kings defence-man Matt Greene said. “We don’t have too many of those guys in the room. But he knows how to lead, and he does it by example.”

Brown prefers showing to telling, whether it’s with a timely goal or a bruising hit. The Los Angeles captain’s playoff performance has demonstrated something quite clearly to the Kings: Behind his leadership they’re capable of winning the franchise’s first title.

Brown’s hard-hitting, high-scoring play has been the biggest revelation of the post-season for the eighth-seeded Kings, but his quantum leap forward began during the regular season. Brown’s run of stellar play started right after he was prominently featured in trade-deadline rumours linking him to Toronto and beyond, forcing the forward to wonder whether he would have to move his young family away from his only NHL team.

“Of course it’s concerning to you, but I tried to just concentrate on what I could control,” said Brown, the NHL’s third-leading post-season scorer. “I just focused on hockey and getting this team to the playoffs, because I felt like we had a team that could do a lot if we got there and started playing together. We felt like we owed it to the fans here to take a shot instead of worrying.”

The Kings’ long-suffering fans are always near the forefront of Brown’s mind when he discusses this playoff run. He realizes Los Angeles has enjoyed only one previous run to the final in 45 years, and he learned all about the Kings’ paltry playoff success when he logged 431 regular-season games with the franchise before reaching his first post-season two years ago.

“This is the most successful we’ve been, but it’s not where we want to end up,” Brown said.

Raonic ‘finally’ gets win at French Open

Canadian Milos Raonic has already improved on last year’s performance at the French Open.

Raonic powered past Ruben Ramirez Hidalgo of Spain 6-4, 6-2, 6-2, on Monday to reach the second round of the tournament.

The 19th seed from Thornhill, Ont., opened with a win on another sunny day at Roland Garros after losing in the first round a year ago to German Michael Berrer.

“It was good to finally win my first match here,” said Raonic. “It was good to play a guy like him, who doesn’t give you much. I had to go and win the match.”

Raonic will next face American qualifier Jesse Levine, who beat Benjamin Becker of Germany 7-5, 6-2, 6-4.

“I need to keep doing the right things and I need to work on my serving a bit,” said Raonic. “I’ll have to go out and play aggressive against him.”

The Canadian dominated from the start, breaking his Spanish opponent five times with 12 aces.

Raonic ended with 58 winners against just 10 for Ramirez Hidalgo.

Dancevic pulls out

Canadian Frank Dancevic exited the French Open after less than 30 minutes, retiring due to a back issue.

- The Niagara Falls, Ont., native was down 4-0 to Martin Klizan of Slovakia when he pulled out of the first-round match.

- Dancevic said he was afraid of aggravating a back injury he suffered last month in Florida.

Spurs at their best when playing with 'nasty' edge

NBA. San Antonio on verge of 20-game win streak in West finals

Gregg Popovich's "I want some nasty!" is fast becoming the catchphrase of the NBA playoffs. It's eminently quotable, brash and an overnight splash.

In other words, it's everything the veteran-led San Antonio Spurs are not.

They've also heard far worse in timeouts from the NBA coach of the year, who belted his now-famous marching orders that jump-started a fourth-quarter rally, extended a history-matching winning streak to 19 and left Oklahoma City stunned heading into Game 2 of the Western Conference finals on Tuesday night.

"You've got to watch Pop — he's good at turning that microphone on and off," Spurs forward Stephen Jackson said Monday. "You don't hear some of the stuff he says."

Quoted

"You can't give up a 30-point quarter in a playoff game and expect to win."

Oklahoma City's Derek Fisher. The Thunder were actually outscored 39-27 by the Spurs in the fourth quarter of Game 1.

All the Thunder mostly heard Monday were questions about their collapse.

Oklahoma City started the fourth quarter leading — a rare feat against the Spurs in the 47 days since their last loss. Going up 2-0 would put the Spurs among just three other teams in NBA history with winning streaks of 20 games or longer.

It would also break the record for longest winning streak extended in the playoffs.

"We really don't care," guard Manu Ginobili said. "We are close — seven games — from accomplishing something way better than a streak."

Horoscope

- ♈ Aries | March 21 - April 20. Don't focus too much on work today. Give yourself time off from your chores and give yourself permission to have fun.
♉ Taurus | April 21 - May 21. Call it as you see it today, even if it means offending someone you have feelings for.
♊ Gemini | May 22 - June 20. Passion planet Pluto will stir your emotions today and there may be times when your feelings get a bit extreme.
♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22. What's done is done and cannot be undone, and the sooner you let go of the past and focus on the future

- the better.
♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. If you find yourself caught between rival factions today you must get yourself out of the firing line as quickly as possible.
♍ Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. If you believe in what you are doing then today's Sun-Pluto link won't have any effect on you.
♎ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. You just know that some seriously good opportunities are coming your way. Don't waste them.
♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. Today's somewhat negative influences will make minor details look more important than they really are.
♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec.

- ♑ 21. Some things are important and some things don't matter. Do you know how to tell the difference?
♒ Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan 20. You seem to be making things difficult for yourself for no good reason.
♓ Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18. If anyone needs a helping hand or a shoulder to cry on today you will be there in a flash. But don't get so caught up in their woes that you lose sight of what is important for you. Your feelings matter too.
♈ Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. The planets warn there is a danger you will arrive at a conclusion about someone on no more than hearsay evidence, which could turn them against you. SALLY BROMPTON
